Selfridge upgrades funding advances

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The House Appropriations Committee on April 21 advanced a spending bill that includes $162 million for infrastructure upgrades at Selfridge Air National Guard base in Macomb Co.

The infusion of money – and eventual work for the building trades – will be spent to extend taxiways and complete construction necessary to prepare the base to host a new mission of 21 F-15EX Eagle fighter jets. President Donald Trump announced the new mission for the base when he visited it last year. The committee's movement of the bill is an important step, but final approval will come from a vote by the entire Congress.

Located in Harrison Twp. on the western shore of Lake St. Clair, Selfridge was established in 1917 during World War I and is one of the oldest continuously operating military airfields in the nation.

"Selfridge is a critical asset to our national security and a major contributor to Michigan's economy," said U.S. Rep. John Moolenaar (R- 2nd District) who sits on the Appropriations Committee and voted to advance the funds. "President Trump rightly recognizes its role in our keeping our country safe and committed a new fighter mission to the base last year.

"However, there is work to be done to update the base to fit the needs of the new F-15EX fighters."

Expanded EV power plan OK'd for MI

LANSING – The state Department of Transportation on April 6 announced a significant milestone in Michigan's journey toward widening the placement of electric vehicle chargers and related infrastructure.

MDOT announced that the Federal Highway Administration has approved Michigan's Fiscal Year 2026 Electric Vehicle Infrastructure Deployment Plan, as well as a "certification request" under the National Electric Vehicle Infrastructure Program, which allocated $106 million to Michigan for the deployment of EV charging infrastructure.

There is a lot of government programs mentioned here, but the bottom line is that MDOT is now authorized to begin investing the remaining $51 million in federal funds to accelerate deployment of EV charging infrastructure in the state. "This funding will help strategically expand fast charging infrastructure, close critical gaps in Michigan's EV charging network, support economic development and ensure that Michigan remains a leader in mobility innovation," MDOT said.

Further, MDOT said it will apply for another round of federal money to help "every Michigan community... support the program's goals of closing geographic gaps, supporting medium-duty vehicles and fleets, improving charger reliability and user experience, promoting equitable access and aligning charging investments with economic development, tourism and long-term grid considerations."

SEEN FROM ACROSS the Lodge Freeway in Detroit, the most prominent part of Henry Ford Health's Destination Grand is the new 20-story patient tower that's under construction. Leading the project are Barton Malow, Turner Construction and Dixon Construction Services. The red brick tower at the right is a 17-story, 1955 addition to the original Henry Ford Hospital. Both facilities will face each other across West Grand Boulevard.

DETROIT – One of the largest ongoing construction projects in the state is, if we can borrow a cliché, looking up.

Anchored by a 20-story patient tower rising across the street from its 111-year-old main hospital along West Grand Boulevard, Henry Ford Hospital promises its massive, ongoing "Destination Grand" project will "reimagine" its campus in the city's New Center area.

Eighteen months into the project, it sure looks like its going to be pretty grand.

"Our wonderful patients, our talented team members, and our communities near and far deserve this world-class space," said Dr. Steven Kalkanis, CEO of Henry Ford Hospital. "We cannot wait until 2029 when the entire project is complete, and we can open the new hospital doors and show the world what the future of health looks like."

The project is being managed by the team of Barton Malow, Turner Construction and Dixon Construction Services. The $2.2

Labor law sheriffs made disappearing act in '25

(From the IBEW, April 1, 2026)

Federal worker protection cases and penalties collapsed in the first year of the Trump Administration, part of a greater project that is killing regulations that protect workers and then failing to punish companies that violate the laws that remain.

Between 2009 and 2024, the number of cases brought by the Wage and Hour Division of the Department of Labor and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration held steady at about 375 per month.

In the first nine months of the second Trump Administration, wage violation cases plummeted by 98 percent, to only nine cases a month. And as cases nearly disappeared, penalties assessed to violators plunged.

These details come from the Department of Labor's own statistics and were compiled in a report, "Worker Protections in Freefall," prepared by Good Jobs First (a non-profit, nonpartisan watchdog group founded in 1998).

"This was not a miraculous change of heart in the American managerial class that stealing our wages and damaging our bodies is wrong," said IBEW Government Affairs Director Dean Warsh. "Bad things don't stop happening when the sheriff quits. That's what they did. They closed their eyes and left the American worker to the wolves."

The physical and financial injuries the Wage and Hour Division should be on the lookout for are some of the most devastating

Bipartisan change would allow full OT tax deduction

By Marty Mulcahy

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The "One, Big Beautiful Bill Act" adopted by the GOP-led Congress last year and signed by President Trump, wasn't quite big enough to include an overtime-earning tax break for millions of workers who are covered by collective bargaining agreements. Among those missing out on the OT tax break are building trades union workers.

Symbolically at the tax deadline last month, bipartisan legislation was introduced in Congress to expand the "No Tax on Overtime" policy within the expansive federal law, to include about three million workers who are currently ineligible for a tax deduction on overtime earnings.

In an April 16 letter that the AFL-CIO Transportation Trades Department authored and organized, the unions explained the Big Beautiful bill bans taxing overtime pay only for some work-ers because it adopts "a limited provision" of who's eligible for overtime under the 1938 Fair Labor Standards Act.

The unions that are among those on the outside looking in to getting the tax break on overtime – want in. They include union railroaders, first responders, transport workers, municipal workers and building trades

Hearing protection benefits go beyond protecting hearing

By Nate Schreiber
Laborers Health and Safety Fund of North America

For years hearing conservation has been viewed as just another safety rule to follow. Complete your training. Wear your earplugs. Take your audiogram.

If you experience some hearing loss along the way, that just comes with the territory in construction.

New data is making it clear that hearing loss isn't just about your ears. It's about your brain health and your long-term independence.

A major international review found hearing loss to be one of the largest risk factors for dementia. Researchers estimate that hearing loss may account for roughly eight percent of dementia cases worldwide, representing hundreds of thousands of cases each year.

These findings from occupational health researchers suggest that preventing hearing loss may help reduce risks of dementia, cognitive decline and even depression. In other words, hearing conservation programs may be one of the most important lifelong health protections employers can provide to their workers.

"More and more evidence is showing that protecting hearing is not just a matter of compliance, but a fundamental investment in the long-term health and productivity of our workforce," says Laborers Health and Safety Fund of North America Management Co-Chair David F. Rampono. "This shift in perspective elevates

NMA pact assures union talent to build Stargate data center

By Marty Mulcahy
Editor

WASHINGTON, D.C. – One of the largest construction projects in Michigan's history will be built union, it was affirmed under the terms of a National Maintenance Agreement (NMA) contract announced April 20.

The $7 billion Stargate campus – which includes a massive new data center – has started construction in Saline Twp. in Washtenaw County. It is expected to employ some 2,500 union tradespeople affiliated with 14 international unions following the terms of an NMA pact between the Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council, general contractor Walbridge, and Related Digital, representing ownership.

The announcement of the union-only agreement has national implications in the organized construction industry, and took place during the April 19-22 North America's Building Trades Unions' (NABTU) Legislative Conference.

"This agreement marks an important step for our industry and for America's AI future," said North America's Building Trades Unions President Sean McGarvey. "Stargate Michigan will be the first data center built under NABTU and OpenAI's historic Memorandum of Understanding concerning data center construction.

"This project will be built under a building trades agreement, guaranteeing the highest standards of safety, training, and craftsmanship. Together with our Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council, we're ensuring that this project is built by the most highly skilled union workforce in the country, setting a national benchmark for how data centers should be built."

The "hyperscale" 1.4 gigawatt Stargate data center development is backed by Open-AI, Oracle, and Related Digital. It will include three 550,000-square-foot single-story buildings on 250 acres of land in Saline Twp., about 10 miles south of Ann Arbor. The new AI-related infrastructure will have energy-efficient features with a closed-loop water cooling

Controversial, yes – but data centers are set to become state job engines

By Marty Mulcahy

Data centers and other artificial intelligence-driven projects are here, and more are on the way.

That doesn't necessarily mean that the centers and related projects will win any popularity contests from their neighbors, environmental groups, and people simply opposed to Big Technology firms getting a firmer hold on the nation's economy and social structure. There are valid concerns about the presence of data centers that threaten to hold up, or sink the projects. Some of them are wildly inflated, some are understandable.

In response, a bipartisan group of state lawmakers in February introduced legislation that would halt state approval of all data center construction in Michigan until April 1, 2027.

That's an extreme response to data centers, that in the near term, would affect one industry more than others: construction. "It's about whether our state is open for business or not," said a statement by the Michigan Chamber of Commerce. (Also see the Viewpoints response on Page 2).

And the proposed legislation comes in light of a statement last month made by Mike Haller, CEO of Walbridge, the state's largest construction company, to Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council Legislative Conference delegates. Haller suggested the state's construction industry would be "approaching a recession" absent the prospect of data centers being built in Michigan.

So where do data centers and related technology-based construction stand in Michigan as we gain momentum into the 2026 construction season? Let's load the program:

•The Michigan Data Centers group counts 75 data centers in place or under construction in 12 Michigan "markets." All are in the Lower Peninsula, and only one, in Alpena, is north of Mount Pleasant.

•Among them, there are currently 16 data centers in varying stages of development in 10 Michigan counties.

•All of them are dwarfed by the state's first "hyperscale" center now under construction in Saline Township. Operated by Oracle and OpenAI with construction managed by Walbridge, the $7 billion "Stargate Michigan" data center is expected to create 2,500 union construction jobs and 450 permanent roles.

WORKERS IN CONSTRUCTION are among the most exposed to hazardous noise levels. Wearing hearing protection is important in more ways than you might expect.

Viewpoints

Data centers = jobs

In February, bipartisan state legislation was introduced that would halt approval of all data center construction in Michigan until April 1, 2027. A number of local communities in Michigan have already instituted local moratoriums on data center construction.

The state legislation aims to eventually address concerns about energy and water demands and ratepayer impacts.

João Ferreira, a regional economist for the University of Virginia's Weldon Cooper Center for Public Service, told Governing Magazine that "data centers likely are attracted to the Great Lakes region because of its competitive electricity prices, relatively strong transmission networks, a cooler climate, and industrial land. Also, all of the Great Lakes states have tax incentives for data center development."

Said a statement from the Michigan Chamber of Commerce: "Billions of dollars in private investment are actively looking for a home, including here in Michigan. Blocking this growth sends a chilling message to employers considering investing in our state."

So the response to loud data center protestors from some state lawmakers – is an outright ban on the projects that put bread on the table for thousands of building trades workers?

Here is a response from the Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council:

An open letter to policymakers:

The Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council stands firmly opposed to data center moratoriums. The planned investments of data centers will create meaningful opportunities for skilled workers across Michigan. These projects will support good-paying jobs and strengthen the skilled trades pipeline for the women and men who build and maintain our state's vital infrastructure. A blanket pause at this point, after Michigan has successfully secured major projects, would only jeopardize union construction jobs and risk pushing this work to other states in the future.

Michigan is not like other, unregulated states that need time to put data center policies in place. Michigan already enacted bipartisan legislation to address infrastructure costs, ratepayer protections, and regulatory oversight for data centers.

Compared to other states with a sales and use tax exemption, Michigan's exemption is considerably more environmentally conscious than others. It is only granted if the developer adheres to strict environmental protections, which safeguard our state's natural resources.

The Michigan Public Service Commission (MPSC) has also worked the strongest consumer protections in the country into contracts with data center customers to guarantee that existing ratepayers are protected, including financial risk protections, long-term contract commitments, minimum billing requirements, early termination fees, emergency energy reliability protections, and collateral requirements. Regulators agree that Michigan has "best in class" protections for customers through the MPSC – other customers won't subsidize these projects in Michigan. Data centers are paying to come here, if anything, they'll put downward pressure on rates.

Our members do not benefit from delays. They benefit from projects breaking ground, strong labor standards, and enforceable protections applied now. Union workers live in these communities and are fully invested in responsible development and environmental stewardship. These goals can and should be achieved without halting projects that are ready to move forward.

We urge all stakeholders, policymakers, to stand with our labor brothers and sisters and address any lingering concerns now. Michigan cannot afford to pause while neighboring states continue to capture investment and projects that should be built here by Michigan workers.

million development has four distinct projects: the new 1.2 million-square-foot hospital facility; a 30,000-square-foot central energy hub; a seven-level, 1,500+ space parking deck, and a 185,000-square-foot shared-services center that will house the hospital's kitchen, loading dock, sterile processing and more. Ground was broken on the project in September 2025 and work is expected to be completed in 2029.

The new tower will connect via enclosed bridges to the legacy hospital building (which opened in 1915 and will remain open). The new facility will include 432 all-private patient rooms. Five of those floors will offer specialized ICU rooms, from cardiovascular to neurological. The three top floors, comprising 72 patient beds, is where patients will receive inpatient physical medicine and rehabilitation.

A vastly expanded emergency department on the new tower's ground floor will provide 75,000 square feet of modern treatment space, including 100 private, flexible treatment spaces.

The ED will contain 100 patient rooms, including a secure 10-room behavioral health treatment area. The tower will also contain 28 new operating rooms capable of handling nearly every type of complex surgical case, from transplants to brain surgery.

The "destination" portion of the project includes Henry Ford Health's place in improving the New Center area. The hospital expansion plan is part of a broader development vision in the New Center neighborhood, including a new cancer center on the campus, as well as a partnership with Michigan State University in a health sciences building under construction nearby.

It's also in the neighborhood with the Henry Ford Detroit Pistons Performance Center, a 100,000-square-foot, $90 million training complex and corporate headquarters completed in 2019.

Birds of greed fly to tax-free nests

By Jim Hightower

Oh, gosh, there goes another one – another billionaire "flighty bird," angrily fitting away from the home nest that long nurtured him.

This latest one is Howard Schultz, the high-flying avaricious avian who tucked away a multibillion-dollar personal fortune as the monopolistic, exploitative CEO of the Starbucks coffee chain.

Howard has recently fallen into a deep pout over the downright rudeness he says he's received from officials in his home base of Washington State.

What's his gripe? Haven't you heard, he squawks, the state legislature intends to make rich corporatists like me start paying income taxes!

Indeed, Washington is one of only nine states with no income tax, even on billionaires.

Instead, to fund public needs, it relies on regressive sales taxes paid by poor and middle-income consumers. So, in an overdue stand for fairness and the Common Good, the state is levying a minimal tax on those few elites who haul in more than a million bucks a year – with the money going to such crucial public needs as child care.

But damn the need, Billionaire Schultz is foot-stomping furious that he would have to pay his fair share for the upkeep of the state that has helped him thrive.

So, Howard has taken flight, winging clear across the country to Florida, where the right-wing governor and legislature shields the rich from pesky taxes.

Proving that "birds of a feather flock together," the aristocratic chieftains of such other corporate fiefdoms as Amazon, Meta, and Google are also now nesting in Florida's tax-evasion enclaves. When billionaires declare "We're all in this together" – they don't mean you me – only themselves and their tax lawyers.

Just joking

A man goes to the doctor, complaining that he has been suffering from terrible headaches for years.

The doctor looks at him sympathetically and says, "you know, I have the same problem. I've tried every medicine in the book and nothing worked."

The man asks, "So, what do you do when you get a headache?"

The doctor replies, "I found that the only thing that works for me is to make love to my wife. That cures the headaches every time."

The man thinks for a moment and says, "Sounds great! I'll give it a try!"

So he goes back to the clinic a week later and tells the doctor, "that worked. I've had a headache for 10 years, and now I'm cured!"

"By the way, I love what you're done with your place!"

BUILDING MICHIGAN: Making gliders in the U.P. HISTORY IN THE MAKING

By Marty Mulcahy

THE FORD MOTOR CO. PLANT in Kingsford, circa 1940-50. Located in Kingsford but often referred to as the Iron Mountain plant, Ford carved out nearly a half-million acres of Upper Peninsula forest land to harvest trees and originally manufacture wooden parts for its Model T. The plant began operations in December 1921, with the sawmill in full operation, followed by body plant production in March 1922. Declining operations at the Upper Peninsula plant boomed again with the onset of World War II, as Ford began production of wooden gliders that would help deliver men and materiel to war zones. Using waste wood, charcoal briquette manufacturing at the works became a side hustle for Ford. It was a complex plant, which includes in this view a distillation building, carbonization building, seven charcoal briquette storage silos, a new powerhouse with its twin smokestacks, the sawmill complex, and an original power plant with its water tower, and a maintenance building. The view also shows three body plants and dry kilns. With the introduction of all-steel bodies and wheels, Ford's need for wooden auto parts would diminish, but the plant remained open as Ford switched from buying bodies for its "woodie" station wagons, to making them in-house in 1937. In December 1942, one year after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, the Iron Mountain factory started mass-producing Waco CG-4A gliders in Iron Mountain.

Alongside the heavy metal portion of Michigan's World War II Arsenal of Democracy — where our state's plants produced Sherman tanks, Deuce-and-a-Half-ton trucks, B-24 bombers, naval destroyers — even GIs' helmets — a somewhat softer, temporarily lighter-than-air product is often forgotten.

We refer to the unsung Ford WACO CG4A Glider, which was manufactured in the Ford Motor Co. Kingsford Plant between December 1942 and August 1945. Ford halted its production of wooden-sided wagon bodies ("woodies") at the plant in order to participate in the war effort.

Ford produced — economically, quickly and with high-end craftsmanship — nearly a third of all the World War II gliders that were produced.

The Ford Motor Co.'s production of gliders, wrote Kevin Edlebeck for the Military History of the Upper Great Lakes, "was a much-needed change for the local economy and a great demonstration how industries both big and small played their part in the second world war." Ford and its workforce produced 4,190 CG4A (C-cargo; G-glider) gliders during the war, out of the total 13,909 gliders made in the U.S. by 16 manufacturers. The gliders were designed by WACO Aircraft of Troy, Ohio.

"During World War II, the Ford Motor Co.'s plant in Kingsford built more Model CG-4A Gliders for the United States Army than any other company in the nation at less cost than other manufacturers," says the World War II Glider and Military Museum in Iron Mountain. "The glider featured in this museum is one of only seven fully restored CG-4A World War II gliders in the world."

Mark Swanson, foreman of the afternoon shift at the Kingsford plant, recalled that at first, two or three gliders were produced daily, but when they went into 24-hour production, eight gliders could be manufactured. His story was conveyed by William John Cummings and distributed by Northern Michigan University.

Swanson reported that about 4,500 employees worked three shifts around the clock.

THE FORD MOTOR CO. Kingsford sawmill, circa 1921-1930. Peak employment at the Ford Kingsford plant was about 7,500 in 1925. Ford exited sawmill and parts plant operations in 1951.

THE ASSEMBLY LINE FLOOR in Kingsford for the Ford WACO CG4A Glider. The Waco CG-4A was constructed in part with steel tubing, about an inch or so in diameter, and a floor of honeycombed plywood. The fuselage of the CG-4A was 48 feet long and covered in fabric. The wings, which spanned 83.5 feet, were made of wooden spars covered with fabric. Towed behind a C-47, the glider's top speed was 150 mph. The tow rope was made up of 350 feet of nylon cord, and wrapped around it was an electrical umbilical cable that allowed the crews of the two aircraft to communicate. Once free of the tow plane, the CG-4A's gliding speed was 72 mph. Although CG-4A has been described as having the "glide ratio of a brick," it was generally considered easy to fly. Most of the gliders were treated as disposable but the Allies did develop a system for C-47s to come in low and slow and snag a tow rope to recover them.

During the afternoon shift the gliders were finished, inspected, torn down and the fuselages for the next day were set into place.

The gliders were shipped to U.S. ports via railroad, each aircraft occupying five crates loaded on three flatcars. They were shipped to war zones worldwide. Uncrated by soldiers, they needed to be assembled. They had blueprints, but the gliders were made up of 70,000 parts made by 16 companies, so some of the parts didn't always fit, a leading cause of grumbling among GIs.

Gliders, were just that — they had no motor or propellers, no armaments and limited instrumentation. A pilot and copilot could silently land the gliders to deliver supplies, equipment and soldiers.

According to the Military History of the Upper Great Lakes, the gliders were made with steel tubing, wood, and wrapped in canvas. They were towed behind planes until they were within distance of their landing zone. They were then cut loose and made an attempt to land behind enemy lines. "Gliders were used because they were cheap, so they could be abandoned after landing," the Military History said. "They were effective at placing troops behind enemy lines considering the danger. Gliders were also silent, which made them ideal for night missions over Germany."

According to the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum, the WACO design became the military's "workhorse" glider. Weighing 3,900 lbs. empty, it could weigh up to 9,000 lbs. at its limit.

Said the Smithsonian: "The Waco could haul several different cargoes in addition to the pilot and copilot: 13 infantry soldiers and their gear; a jeep and four passengers; or a 75mm howitzer cannon and 18 rounds of ammunition plus three passengers. A tow plane such as the Douglas C-47 could haul the Waco at 150 mph and a skilled pilot could stop the glider in a few hundred feet, depending on the load carried and the ground conditions.

"The glider was designed to land intact for use in repeated airborne assaults, but combat operations took their toll and most crash-landed, damaging many beyond repair."

It's a small wonder that there was shortage of volunteer glider pilots. Army leaders had to order pilots from fighter and bomber units to join the glider forces. The U.S. Marine Corps and U.S. Navy ran their own independent glider programs.

system, to limit its impact on the environment.

Developers say it is "designed to support the infrastructure demands of next-generation artificial intelligence."

When the Stargate project was announced in October 2025, Gov. Gretchen Whitmer said "we won the largest economic project in Michigan history."

"Michigan is proud to be home to the first project built under NABTU and OpenAI's Memorandum of Understanding," said Steve Claywell, Secretary-Treasurer of the Michigan Building and Construction Trades Council. "Stargate Michigan will create thousands of good union jobs while delivering real economic benefits to our local communities. By putting skilled local building trades workers on the job, this project will be built safely, efficiently, and with strong environmental standards, showing that Michigan can lead the nation in both innovation and opportunity."

Development and construction on the project are being led by Related Digital, with Walbridge, a 100-year-old Michigan-based company, serving as general contractor and being instrumental in the negotiation of the labor agreements. Completion is expected in late 2028.

"Michigan's strong, skilled union labor force was a huge factor in the selection of this site and our confidence in delivering this important project for OpenAI and Oracle," said Bruce Beal, Jr., president of Related Companies.

"As we build the AI infrastructure of the future, we are also substantially growing opportunities for our tradesmen and tradeswomen and creating a new pipeline of work for American general contractors and subcontractors. We could not do that without this agreement with NABTU and the Michigan Building Trades, and we know how much it means for union workers to be able to build projects of this scale in their home state."

Walbridge, the state's largest general contractor, is managing construction at the Stargate site.

"As the general contractor for the Stargate Michigan campus, Walbridge is proud to help deliver a project of national significance in our home state," said Walbridge CEO Mike Haller. "This agreement strengthens collaboration between owners, builders, and the skilled trades, reinforcing that strong partnerships and a highly trained workforce are essential to building the next generation of critical infrastructure."

Sam Altman, founder and CEO of OpenAI, said the massive demand for computing power — "both to ensure broad-based access to intelligence and to assure the world builds out on democratic AI — is creating one of the biggest opportunities in generations to reindustrialize the United States. At the center of that effort are the skilled tradespeople who make it possible, from framing the buildings, installing the steel, operating the equipment, laying the pipes, and pouring the concrete to building the cooling systems."

"This agreement will help ensure Stargate Michigan is built by the best-trained workforce in the country, and we're excited to work with NABTU and the Michigan Building Trades to help create good jobs as we build the infrastructure needed for the AI economy."

hearing safety from a regulatory requirement to a core health promotion strategy."

Occupational noise is a major contributor.

Hearing loss is not just a result of aging. Workplace noise plays a critical role. Data from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) also shows that:

- It is common for construction workers to have the hearing equivalent of workers twice their age.
- About 51 percent of construction workers are exposed to hazardous noise.
- Over half of exposed workers do not consistently wear hearing protection.
- Nearly one in four noise-exposed workers tested show measurable hearing impairment, meaning workplace prevention can significantly change long-term health outcomes

Hearing loss and dementia.

According to Frank Lin of the Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health, hearing loss forces the brain to work harder to interpret sound. This "brain strain" may divert energy away from memory and thinking systems. Other researchers suggest that this strain may accelerate brain shrinkage or lead to social isolation, both known contributors to cognitive decline as you age.

Large ongoing studies are investigating whether treating hearing loss with hearing aids can slow brain aging. Early results suggest that restoring hearing may help preserve cognitive function in older adults.

Hearing loss and mortality risk. Another study involving nearly 20,000 construction trades workers from the Building Trades National Medical Screening Program adds an additional layer of concern; hearing loss is associated with higher risk of mortality.

The study, led by researchers including Marianne Cloeren and John Dement, found that:

- Workers with speech level hearing loss had roughly a 10 percent higher risk of mortality.
- There is good news to be found in this; workers who use hearing aids in the study had up to 30 percent lower mortality risk compared to those with untreated hearing loss.

These findings suggest that hearing health affects overall survival, not just communication ability. As Cloeren noted during a recent Center to Protect Workers' Rights webinar: "It's one thing to lose your hearing, but it has other implications if it means you may die earlier or develop dementia."

Hearing conservation as prevention.

Effective hearing conservation programs have to go beyond just distributing earplugs. They require:

- Reducing noise at the source
- Engineering quieter tools and equipment
- Consistent monitoring of worker audiograms
- Identifying temporary threshold shifts early
- Diagnosing hearing loss before symptoms appear
- Providing access to affordable hearing aids

The NIOSH Buy Quiet initiative is a program that encourages employers to invest in quieter machinery rather than relying solely on personal protective equipment. NIOSH provides a database of quieter tools that pay off in worker health costs in the long run.

The Bottom Line. Noise exposure is not just a short-term inconvenience. It may influence how you age, brain health and longevity decades after exposure occurs. Protecting hearing today may protect independence, memory and your quality of life in the future. For construction employers and workers alike, hearing conservation is no longer just another safety regulation, it's a lifelong investment in your health.

crimes committed against working people. Financially, at least $19 billion is stolen from American workers every year by their employers, according to a 2019 study from the Economic Policy Institute.

That vastly exceeds all other kinds of theft – larceny, muggings, car thefts – combined.

Out of a workforce of 165 million people, there are more than 3 million workplace-related injuries or deaths each year.

OSHA and the Wage and Hour Division were created to protect all workers from abuses that were simply common business practices in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. Knee-capping law enforcement invites a return of those dark days, Warsh said. “The incidence of these attacks on working people hasn’t dropped. Only the penalties have fallen,” he said. “The chance of getting caught was already too low. Since Trump’s second inauguration, it’s fallen to just about zero.”

Some of the starkest collapses were in the areas of most interest to the IBEW’s construction members. One of the union’s critical tools to organize work is ensuring that the Department of Labor has accurate prevailing wage data.

Each year, business managers and international representatives spend hundreds of hours collecting and passing on wage information to the DOL to set wage standards for federal and federally funded construction projects covered by the Davis-Bacon Act.

The law was designed to keep publicly funded projects out of the hands of contractors that build low bids on underpaid, low-skilled and exploited workers. If a contractor can’t win by lowballing labor costs, it has to compete on the quality of the work, and that’s why the IBEW wins so many Davis-Bacon projects.

“Contractors that violate the Davis-Bacon Act are going to be the worst actors in our industry. They not only rip off their own workers, but they rip off the taxpaying public, pocket the premium for public projects and then lie about it,” said IBEW International President Kenneth W. Cooper.

According to the federal Wage and Hour Division statistics, the average penalties in the Obama Administration for Davis-Bacon violations were about $27 million per year. In the first Trump Administration, penalties averaged about $19 million. Under President Joe Biden, they averaged about $21 million.

In 2025, they were only about $1.3 million, which was down 95 percent from the Obama average, 94 percent from Biden and 93 percent from Trump’s first administration.

The Trump Administration’s abandonment of working people is even worse than it looks because the starting point was already far too low. The DOL has been vastly underfunded and understaffed for decades.

The U.S. workforce has grown from about 107 million in 1980 to nearly 170 million in 2024, yet the DOL budget shrank in that time from $119 billion to $54.3 billion in real dollars. The result is a crippling small force looking out for the interests of American workers. OSHA has one inspector for every 70,000 workers, while the Wage and Hour Division has one inspector for every 270,000.

Staffing for wage-and-hours enforcement is at the lowest level since the office was created, at only 611. And its about to get worse.

OSHA is slated to lose 12 percent of its already depleted inspection workforce, according to the Good Jobs First report, and the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, the workplace safety research agency that provides guidelines for OSHA, is facing an 80 percent cut in funding.

But reducing oversight, even this dramatically, is only half the story, said IBEW Construction and Maintenance Director Matt Paules. “They are also slashing the laws that protect us from bad employers. They never hid it. They published a playbook – Project 2025. They are just doing what they said they would to kneecap labor protections,” he said.

Since his inauguration, President Donald Trump’s DOL has repealed at least 60 worker protections, including stopping enforcing rules against misclassification of independent contractors, ending the practice of seeking liquidated damages – remedies beyond back wages – for harmed workers and waiving civil penalties for employers who self-report wage violations.

It also stopped fining companies for delayed or incomplete wage payments and revoked a rule that increased the prevailing wage floor for federal contractors.

One of the most consequential changes for construction workers was expanding the definition of “small employers” that qualify for lower penalty rates to include businesses with up to 25 employees.

Although the pace has slowed somewhat, Warsh said, the Trump Administration has plans to weaken worker protections further.

Proposed changes include removing construction lighting safety requirements, as well as narrowing respirator guidelines for asbestos and eliminating mandatory medical evaluations for workers who use respirators while working with asbestos or other carcinogens.

Of particular concern, he said, is a proposal to change the General Duty Clause, a catch-all provision for safety standards, to exclude activities that are “inseparable” from the work.

The change would limit the DOL’s ability to cite employers for injuries in industries where injuries are “part of the job.” At first, this would mostly mean entertainment and sports, but that’s not the ultimate aim, Paules said.

“The big prize would be expanding beyond these industries to any so-called high-risk profession, and that’s us square in the bomb sight,” he said. “There will always be contractors who throw up their hands and say danger is just ‘a part of our work.’ What they mean is they would rather sacrifice a worker than a dollar of profit.”

Finally, the DOL has proposed ending coordinated enforcement activities between the Wage and Hour Division and OSHA. In past administrations, the DOL discovered that companies that stole workers’ wages were more likely to put their workers’ safety at risk. Combining investigations made every scarce investigator more efficient.

“Workers will be cheated more, get hurt and die more. There will be fewer protections, fewer inspectors, and the ones that are left will be less effective,” Paules said.

“We pay a price for everything we get or take in this world; and although ambitions are well worth having, they are not to be cheaply won, but exact their dues of work and self-denial, anxiety and discouragement.”

Plumbing Law Changes: Starting March 20, 2025, anyone performing plumbing work in Michigan must either be registered and in good standing with the State as a plumbing apprentice or hold a current journeyman or master plumbing license. The new legislation also establishes a ratio of one journeyman for every two apprentices, with significant penalties, including steep fines and the suspension or revocation of a plumbing contractor's license for non-compliance.

This is excellent news for our industry and presents a great opportunity to expand our market share in West Michigan. Make sure that your license or apprentice registration is up to date with the State. If your license has expired or you need to register as an apprentice, you must contact the State Licensing Division at 517-241-9316.

Contract Ratification: At the special called meeting on July 1st, the members voted to accept the bargaining committee's recommendation and ratify the new three-year collective bargaining agreement. The new agreement is as follows:

1st year $4.20/ 2nd year $3.30/ 3rd year $3.30
$10.80 over 3 years.

Language changes:

Section 13.2 - reduces the number from issuing orders from 4 to 2 to receive foremen pay.

Section 10.2 - Health care will be on hours paid not hours worked.

*The contractors will now be administering the ESTA benefit.

Organizing Update: With warmer weather brings opportunities to speak with unrepresented workers.

School jobs, construction jobs; a lot of these workers you'll see at gas stations, grocery stores, etc. - look for the Hi-Vis shirts! It's kind of cool just to strike up a conversation with them. Remember, we have more in common with the non-union workers than what separates us. It's no secret. The sunshine brings better moods when conversing.

Better wages, benefits, insurance you don't have to pay for, and a defined pension - the message is clear; all workers deserve a UNION! Work safe, Johnny Ortiz: (616) 307-8551.

Hiring Rule Reminder: As per section 5.8 of the CBA, the 50/50 hiring provision applies only to jobs working under the Local CBA. Any national agreement jobs calling for manpower are not eligible for the 50/50 provision.

Contact Information: If you need to change or verify your contact information, PLEASE CONTACT THE UNION OFFICE as soon as possible so we can keep our system up to date.

Dues: Please keep your monthly window dues current. You can find your dues balance on the website or by calling the Union office. Remember that if you are expelled from the UA, you are no longer eligible to attend Local Union events such as meetings, picnics, awards banquets, and Christmas parties.

Retiree Dues: If you are retiring, it is the member's responsibility to inform the Union Hall on the final day of work in order to request a reduction in window dues at the Retiree Rate. Additionally, it is the member's responsibility to call Ext. 17 to notify dispatch of your retirement, providing your name, phone number, contractor name, and the date of your last day worked.

Autopay for Window Dues: As a result of the rising postage expenses and the significant number of members who have opted for autopay, we have made a change in the way receipts are delivered. Going forward, members will receive their proof of payment via email instead of traditional mail. If you are currently enrolled in autopay but do not have an email address on record and would like a receipt, please contact our office to update your information.

Dispatch: We have split up the dispatch responsibilities between the Business Agent and the Assistant Business Manager positions. Each person will be on dispatch for 2 weeks. SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY REPRESENTING BUILDING TRADES BROTHERS & SISTERS OVER 35 YEARS BIESKE & ASSOCIATES

Many people are wrongly rejected when they apply for Social Security Disability benefits. Money was taken out of their paychecks for Social Security taxes to ensure that they would receive disability benefits if they could no longer work full-time. Sadly, the government denies approximately 60% of those who apply for disability benefits.

Attorneys J.B. Bieske and Jennifer Alfonsi have 55 years combined experience representing only Social Security disability clients. And they personally meet with all clients and appear themselves at all court hearings. Many large firms assign inexperienced attorneys to your case. And some of these firms are located thousands of miles away and only fly the attorney in the day of the court hearing. Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi have vast experience before local Michigan judges.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi can often make a winning difference at the application stage. And, if an appeal is necessary they have won several hundred cases before a court date is even set. Those denied can appeal on their own but statistics for many years reveal that those represented by attorneys win a much higher percentage of appeals. And attorneys who specialize in Social Security Disability cases win a much higher percentage yet.

In addition to practicing only Social Security disability law attorney Bieske has written a book for attorneys about the subject and has been interviewed on various television programs. Both attorney Bieske and Alfonsi have also been interviewed on radio programs and have given speeches to many groups.

Attorneys Bieske and Alfonsi offer free phone or office consultation. If they represent you, there will be no fee charged until after the case is won. The fee is a percentage of retroactive benefits.

Bieske and Alfonsi represent clients from all over the state of Michigan. They maintains offices in Sterling Heights, Livonia, Southgate and Novi. Call them at 1-800-331-3530 for a free consultation if you have been denied, or if you are thinking of possibly applying for Social Security benefits.

A RENDERING of the Stargate data center project in Saline Township.

Controversial, yes – but data centers are set to become state job engines

The 1.4-gigawatt, 250-acre Stargate facility will be one of the largest in the U.S., significantly increasing local tax revenue. It will also utilize an environmentally friendly, closed-loop, non-evaporative cooling system.

Other major data centers in the works in Michigan are a 280-acre, 1-gigawatt development in Van Buren Township, associated with Google. Dubbed "Project Cannoli," the 800,000-square-foot facility near I-94 and Hagerly Road could cost more than $8 billion. It received preliminary site plan approval in February, but faces further review by the Michigan Public Service Commission.

Other projects include Project Flex, a proposed 1.8-million-square-foot, 172-acre data center campus in Oakland County's Lyon Township. Developer Verus wants to build six structures south of Grand River Avenue and east of Milford Road. Other large multi-billion data projects are proposed in Benton Harbor/Berrien County and Augusta Township in Washtenaw County.

Among the aforementioned 75 data centers in Michigan, Governing Magazine reported in December that 35 of the facilities are actually operational – "a relatively small footprint" by comparison with other states. "It might seem like they are cropping up everywhere, but Michigan is behind its neighboring Great Lakes states in developing data centers," Governing said.

Leading the way among Great Lakes states, Illinois has 115 operational data centers, while Ohio has 101. Combined they account for more than 60 percent of the data centers under development for the region.

A study released in February by the Anderson Economic Group on behalf of Consumers Energy found that construction spending of a single data center in Michigan could directly and indirectly support 806 to 30,278 additional jobs in Michigan during the construction period, depending on the facility's size.

The Anderson study also found that a single data center could generate $121 million to $5.5 billion in total net new economic output over the construction period, depending on the facility's scale.

pollution and constrain environmental impacts.

Critics from the environmental movement panned the law for not doing enough to limit the use of water use in cooling the facilities, although individual communities can institute zoning requirements for water-saving closed-loop systems. Green groups, and others, also are concerned about how the centers will tax the ability of the grid to handle the additional power needs, as well as if utility pricing will be raised to accommodate the data centers.

The Anderson Group's Data Center Development in Michigan Economic and Fiscal Impact Analysis said it "relies on the understanding that proposed data center projects receiving approval in Michigan will be long-term facilities that benefit the community and the economy for many years. Temporary facilities do not provide the same benefits as those outlined in this memorandum."

"Further, it is important for developers seeking data center projects in Michigan to be transparent and forthcoming regarding parameters, investors, long-term operations, and ownership. Michiganders have properly questioned those developing and operating these facilities as well as the end user of the data centers."
